The Lead: Renovation, Repair and Painting Rule

Greetings!

You may be wondering, what is the RRP rule and does it affect me. The new act placed into effect April 22, 2010 requires that firms and renovators must be trained and certified to perform work in properties under the guidelines. The rule applies to residential houses, apartments, and child-occupied facilities such as schools and day-care centers built before 1978.

In general, any activity that disturbs paint in pre-1978 housing and child-occupied facilities, including:

- Remodeling & Repair/Maintenance
- Electrical Work
- Plumbing
- Painting
- Carpentry
- Window Replacement

Documentation

According to the EPA RRP Rule:

Among other requirements, this final rule requires firms performing renovations to retain documentation of compliance with work practices. Specifically, the firm must document that a certified renovator was assigned to the project; that the certified renovator provided on-the-job training for workers used on the project; that the certified renovator performed or directed workers who performed the tasks required by this final rule; and that the certified renovator performed the post-renovation cleaning verification. This documentation must include a copy of the certified renovator's training certificate, and the documentation must include a certification by the certified renovator that the work practices were followed with narration as applicable.
